

As a child, I was privileged to have many people teach the Bible in ways that made a difference to my life. As a five year old, my Sunday school teacher's lesson about Jesus brought me to my knees as I accepted Christ as my Savior from sin. During a children's session at a district convention, I was sanctified. I'll never forget the night at youth camp when I was filled with the Holy Ghost. These life-changing moments all happened in areas of Christian education where godly men and women were giving of themselves to introduce me to a relevant Jesus.

The challenges in my life have changed greatly over the years. My adult problems are very different from my childhood problems, yet I have been able to face them because I learned to love a life-changing, relevant Christ as a child. Whether you are a parent, Christian education minister, pastor, or just someone who loves kids, you can impact children. By investing your time, money, and prayer in Christian education you are changing kids' lives. You are drawing them closer to their Savior. There is no greater gift or responsibility.
